

HOW LONG, LORD?

Ysabel and I wanted to do a piece in response to the recent events that have put a spotlight on racial injustice.

Ysabel:

I wrote this last with some friends of mine. We wanted to write something that expressed our frustration and confusion in those difficult situations in life.

I remember watching the news and seeing the riots in the US and all I could think was "How long, Lord?"

The song's been on repeat in my head ever since.

Roxy:

In this artwork I wanted to express the pain and confusion that we feel, as Christians, when we witness injustice, when all we can think is "How long, Lord?"

But I also wanted to remind myself of the hope that the Bible promises.

The verses from Revelation used in this piece tell us that one day perfect justice will be done and that people from every nation and tongue will be welcomed home by the Lamb of God.

There's comfort knowing that He will not fail us in this.

Verses:

Psalm 13, Amos 5:24, Revelation 7:9, Revelation 22:1,3-4

– Ysabel Jane and Roxy Tibbert